If your Will names a personal friend as executor or trustee, think this over.

Can the judgment of one man on matters vitally affecting his heirs be as good as that of the staff of experts employed by the El Paso Bank and Trust Company, combined with that of the responsible business men who compose its Board of Directors?

Will the bond given by an individual trustee afford my estate the assurance of safety that the capital and surplus and the stockholders' liability of the El Paso Bank and Trust Company would give?

Get and read our booklet, "Questions and Answers." Think it over. Then have a talk with one of our officers.

COAL

A nationwide strike of coal miners has been called for October 31st. While there is still some chance that it may yet be averted this strike, if it becomes effective, will prove mighty serious right here in El Paso.

The mines supplying this territory are already away behind with orders, and even though the strike should not last more than a week or ten days, it will so delay production as to make certain a serious shortage here this winter. The only safe way is to

Iron And Steel Industry Workers Show Greatest Increase In Their Pay

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—The increase in the earnings per hour of employees in principal industries in the last six years was greatest in the iron and steel industry, according to a statement made public today by the Bureau of Statistics of the labor department. While in some departments the pay was greater than others, in all departments collectively the hourly pay of steel workers in 1919 was 21 percent of the hourly wage in 1913.

The smallest increased earnings were those in the mill work industry where the increase of 1919 over 1913 was but 11 percent. In the other nine industries for which figures were given the increase varied from 13 to 24 percent. These included cotton, woolen, silk, clothing, underwear, shoes, furniture and cigar factory workers.

CURTAIN RUNG DOWN ON FRENCH WAR PARLIAMENT

Paris, France, Oct. 19.—The curtain was rung down last night on the war parliament. Premier Clemenceau was the leading actor in the final drama. Paul Deschamps, president of the chamber of deputies, deeply moved, eulogized the war soldiers and the heroes of the French nation. He then read the decree closing the session.

Before the applause had subsided, M. Clemenceau arose, and in a loud, clear voice read the decree closing the session.

Deputies, cheering and shouting "Vive la République," crowded around the speaker to congratulate him. Then, bidding one another good bye, they left the chamber.

part from the unions themselves, was also recognized.

Extended Right to Groups.

There was a general feeling that if the individual has a right to join a union and to make an individual agreement with his employer, why not a group of individuals organized perhaps in a shop industrial council.

On their part, the employers steadily maintained that the right granted to an employer to deal directly with a member of a union also carries with it the right to bargain with a group in his shop and to refuse to deal either with a shop council or a trade union or both.

Visually this point will be emphasized with the understanding that the employers are entitled to deal with any organization of shop employees, whether it be a shop council or a trade union.

It is in the introduction of industrial councils outside the shop that the labor leaders claim the workers in any plant can bring in outside representatives, such as trade union officials, immediately the employer consents to the plan. The plan which is being discussed which provides for industrial councils is supposed to be similar to that provided by the Whitley plan in England, but would not permit the union to have a representative in the council and an absolute agreement between the employer and the union after the introduction of industrial councils.

That the labor union official would come in as a sort of mediator in the introduction of industrial councils is a subject of discussion. The employer would be able to leave their case to the trade union official to work out.

The responsibility of the employee to his shop would be maintained and the contract between employer and employee would be unimpaired by any outside intervention.

Against the Sickening,
Salivating Drug.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you'll be a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with your side, it crabs into it, breaking it up. Then it goes into your blood, and makes you feel that awful nausea and cramping. There are, no doubt, tactical walking delegates and reasonable labor leaders but the employers claim these are more apt to be found higher up in labor circles and not in the local districts. They are asserting, therefore, to break out the influence of the factious walking delegate.

which has been broken up during the war by the Russian revolution.

"Did W. Z. Foster, secretary of the steel strike committee, attend your meeting?" asked chairman Kenyon.

"Yes, he came and he was very good," said that he did not want to talk with him.

Foster declared that he could still retain his integrity as a syndicalist, while going into the American Federation of Labor, but he didn't think he would.

"Pickin' within Federation."

"His idea was to retain his views, was it not and get leadership in the American Federation of Labor with which to forward their cause?" asked Kenyon.

"Something like that," Margolis replied.

"Do you consider Foster an anarchist sympathizer?" asked senator Steiner.

"No," said Margolis.

"I think he's a good trade unionist," was the reply. "He has been for me."

Margolis said the American Federation of Labor was "in a state of confusion."

"Out of the last 70 strikes in this country," he said, "62 were successful, showing the worst disaffection within the ranks of a labor union."

Senator McKelvin, Democrat, Tennessee, asked Margolis if he knew anything about the "union of Russian workers."

"There are a group of syndicalist anarchists, who are interested in the movement after the Russian revolution," said the witness.

"Were they trying to organize a union in this country?" asked senator McKelvin.

"No," said Margolis.

"Well, an industrial union rather than a political union," Margolis said.

Senator McKelvin said that he had heard of this union in connection with the steel industry and that the Russian unions there their support in it because they then believed it was a movement to get the steel industry in the United States.

Chairman Kenyon introduced the assembly of the Russian union's constitution which was read by Margolis.

Margolis said he, with the Russian union, were not in a position to make a move in which government is unopposed.

"I don't think there is any prospect for government when private corporations are in control," he said. "When the government is in control, it is a dictatorship and the government can be abolished."

Antman, local representative of the Pathe News, who Monday arranged with the automotive trades and highway department of the chamber of commerce to make the pictures.

Inquiries were received from Phoenix asking when the official race guides issued by the chamber of commerce will be available.
